

It is best to fill your Personal Symptom Chart out at the same time each day.

This will help you determine the pattern and severity of your symptoms and how closely they relate to your period each month. If you are not cycling any longer or are having irregular periods this will help you to track the frequency and severity of your symptoms. After you have carefully tracked your symptoms for two to three months you may want to discuss your findings with your healthcare provider.

Rate the level of your symptom's severity: 1 = Mild 2 = Moderate 3 = Severe None = Leave Blank

DAY OF CYCLE (or day of calendar if not cycling)	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12	13	14	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25	26	27	28	29	30	31
Fatigue/tired/exhausted
Hot flashes
Night sweats
Trouble controlling urine/leaking
Depression
Headaches or migraines
Rapid changes in mood/mood swings
Bloating/water retention
Difficulty falling/staying asleep
Memory problems/forgetfulness
Acne/oily skin
Anxiety/nervousness
Irritability/anger
Hair loss/thinning
Increased facial hair
Breasts tender/sore/swollen
Vaginal dryness/pain/itching
Food cravings - carbs/salty/sweet
Foggy thinking
Loss of sex drive/libido
Muscle weakness
Decreased focus or attention span
Feeling afraid for no reason
Loss of skin tone/wrinkles
Weight gain
Weight loss
Low back and/or joint pain
Dry skin
Cold intolerance
Heavy or irregular periods
Dry eyes
Lack of energy/endurance
Rapid/irregular heartbeat																															